Menehune - Wikipedia

In Hawaiian mythology, the Menehune are said to be an ancient race of people small in stature, who lived in Hawaii before settlers arrived from Polynesia. Many scholars attribute ancient structures found on the Hawaiian Islands to the Menehune. However, others have argued that the legends of the Menehune are a post-European contact mythology and that no such race existed.

Menehunes - YouTube

Hawaiian legend has it that many centuries ago, the Menehune were a mischievous group of small people, or dwarfs, who lived hidden in the forests and valleys of the islands before the first settlers arrived from Polynesia. These Menehune, who roamed the deep forests at night, were said to be about two feet (60 cm) tall, though some were as tiny as six inches (15 cm), small enough to fit in the palm of a hand.

The Legend of the Menehune

The Menehunes are kinda like leprechauns but there were a lot of them, and they are known to just cause trouble. They're short, just like leprechauns, they don't fly or do anything special, they're just there and no one sees them. If your fishing nets suddenly had holes in them, it's the Menehunes causing trouble.

Menehunes are to the Hawaiians what Leprechauns are to the Irish. Their temperament, however, is not as mischievous as that of their Irish counterparts. Instead of being notorious for pulling pranks, the Menehunes are jolly and magical little people with a knack and penchant for performing charitable deeds. It is said that all the beauty of the Hawaiian Islands exists because of the Menehunes: clearing logs away, lowering hills, and sweeping paths.

Hawaiian legend has it that the Menehune are a small dwarf-like species, similar to pixies or trolls, that hide deep in Hawaii's forests and valleys. While these creatures are generally assumed to be mythical, a census from the 1820s officially counted 65 Menehune living in Wainiha Valley, on the island of Kauai.
