Sociability of Man in 21st Century This century is the century of media and technology in their various shapes.

Sociability of man has increased in a sense that social media helps him keep contact even with those whom he never met.

Another point of view is that the sociability of man has been restrained in the modern age.

This research explores patterns of family salience based on sociability and solidarity norms according to the institutional context. The data come from the International Social Survey Program (ISSP), from respondents living in four types of welfare regime countries: Mediterranean, corporatist, liberal, and social-democratic. Based on cluster analyses, we found that the salience of family in sociability practices and
